FIRST WARD VOTERS TO CAST BALLOTS IN CITY'S NEW GARAGE

First ward citizens will cast their ballots at the municipal election, April 6, in the old Hyatt house barn, located on Wall street, in the rear of the city hall. It is said to be the first time in Janesville's history that electors of that ward have voted in any other place than the city hall.

When the northeast room in the basement of the city hall was remodeled into a lock-up last fall it became necessary to close new quarters for a voting booth, so a room of ample size was fitted up in the garage and barn which was purchased by the city from Frank D. Knapp.

It is hoped this will serve as a first ward polling place for years to come. There will be but one other change in voting booths this year, that is, the Fourth ward, where City Clerk E. J. Sartell announces that the city has rented the old T. P. Siegel saloon, 10 South Silver street, to be used as a voting booth a week from the coming Tuesday.

Poling places in the other three wards will be: Second, in the building owned by the city at the foot of Prospect avenue, just off North Main street; Third, in the basement of the public library; Fifth, in the city's building on Holmes street, near Center avenue.

Polls will be opened at 8 o'clock in the morning to remain open continuously until 8 o'clock in the evening. Ballot and election clerks for each ward were appointed several weeks ago by Mayor Welsh.

Per Capita Tax And Valuations Of Janesville

T. A. Polleys tax commissioner of the C. & N. W. R. R. has made public his compilation of the true value per capita of real estate and personal property of the number of the leading cities of Wisconsin. The population of Janesville is estimated at 14,500 by Mr. Polleys. The per capita value of real estate is given at $93 and personal property, $383.

The highest per capita valuation in the state is of Madison, with $1871 but the population is estimated at only 31,000 when in fact the census shows it to have nearly 50,000. That would reduce the valuation materially.

Per capita tax of Janesville is $5.68. The lowest in the state is Beloit with $5.45 and the next Superior $5.55. The highest in the state is Madison, $15.25 and the next La Crosse, $14.19. County tax per capita in Janesville was $2.11, which is lower than most of the cities of the state. The lowest tax for county per capita was for Rice River, 87 cents and Manitowish, $1.11.

Milwaukee's per capita tax for city is $12.32. Its per capita valuation is $1096 for real estate and $362 for personal property.

EMBALLING FLUID IN
BOTTLE OF WOOD ALCOHOL

Rockford, Ill., March 29.—Emballing fluid as a beverage is a veritable "cross bones cocktail," Harry Gustafson is ready to say. He now testifies to the truth of this statement, according to police report.

Gustafson was taken in custody by the police at the corner of Burnes and Buckbee street Sunday noon. Officer Curry answered the call, which he answered by taking a mistletoe had been made and that the coroner should have been summoned instead of the police. Curry was on guard, however, so decided to bring his captive to headquarters where the powers that be could determine the final disposition.

"Detect" a cuckoo, commented Jim Linnon, one-time reporter, who hasn't yet rid himself of the habit of looking around the city hall to keep informed of the doings of Rockford's bluecoats.

A physician was summoned. At first he reported "no pulse," then faint pulse, but very weak. A bottle labeled "Emballing fluid formula, No. 2" was found in Gustafson's pockets, according to the police. Its principal ingredients were alcohol and formaldehyde.

Gustafson is recovering despite the ghastly effects of his revolting debauch.

Tadpoles With Wings
Francis Rolt-Wheeler.

"Ever see a tadpole with wings?" Hugh looked suspiciously at his chum, expecting a catch.

"No, honest, Jack asserted, "I found one here this morning, just a little bit of a one. But he had sure enough wings, sticking out just behind his head."

"Aw! Where did you find him?" This incredulously.

"Right here! In this pond!" "Find another, if you can," chafed Hugh. "First thing you know, you'll be talking about a sparrow with fins!"

Jack was nettled at his chum's tone, but he didn't want to argue about it, so he stooped down and rummaged among the weeds at the edge of the pond, scanning closely the sunny water he scooped up.

Presently he gave a shout: "I've got another!"

And, in his hand, Jack triumphantly showed a tiny tadpole, not more than half an inch long, but with four feathery-like extensions sticking out—just as Jack had said—behind his head.

"Those aren't wings, they're gills, and gills are the lungs of fishes," laughed Hugh. "I know 'cause when I was down in Mexico with Uncle Harry I saw lots of beggars like that, only they were six to eight inches long. They call them azotots down there. I didn't know frogs had them, though."

"Let's see if I can find another," suggested Jack.

And, more used to looking for them, the two boys found that every single one of the very young tadpoles had these external gills, though they lost them when they got to the big-headed, flat-tailed stage.

"Imagine having one's lungs sticking out like that!" commented Jack. "It would be queer," Hugh agreed. (Tomorrow: Hunting Eye meets the Coastguardsman.)

BELOIT MAN GETS BRICK PAVING JOB

Welch's Bid of $77,250 for 11 Blocks Accepted by Board of Public Works.

George Welch, Beloit road builder, was awarded the contract for paving with brick of 11 blocks in the downtown district by the board of public works in special session at the city hall Saturday night.

Welch's bid for the entire job is $77,250, the lowest of the four submitted, and nearly $5,000 under the next lowest bidder, the Gund-Graham company, Freeport. Other bids were as follows: Lampert construction company, Oshkosh, $87,627; and Ed. Sweeney, Reedsburg, $89,841.

The contract calls for brick paving on the following streets:

North First—Main to bluff.
West Milwaukee—Academy to Five Points.
Center avenue—Milwaukee to Center.
Pleasant—Court St. bridge to Franklin.
Franklin—Pleasant to West bluff.
Corn Exchange—Franklin to Milwaukee.

The contract is let with the provision that work be started within 20 days, to be completed by Nov. 1. The job will require approximately 16,000 square yards of paving, 3,725 cubic yards of excavation, 2,000 feet of curb and gutter, and 2,900 feet of gutter flag.

Public Hearing Called.
A four-inch brick paving is required, laid on a six-inch concrete foundation with a one-inch sand cushion using an asphalt filler.
It was voted at the meeting to give notice calling attention of property owners to a public hearing to be held at the council meeting next Monday night, to determine what kind of pavement shall be used for the other 44 blocks included in the 1920 paving program—pavement, asphalt concrete, or reinforced concrete.

APPEALS OF BADGER WETS ARE HEARD

Constitutionality of Dry and Enforcement Acts Are Argued.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, March 29.—The constitutionality of the prohibition enforcement act were argued before the supreme court again today in connection with consideration of the original suit brought by the state of New Jersey and appeals from that state and from Wisconsin. Because of the number of cases arguments were not expected to be concluded before tomorrow.

Cases Similar to R. I. One.
The cases today involved virtually the same questions as the Rhode Island, Kentucky, and Massachusetts cases recently presented to the court, but the original New Jersey suit embodied a more extensive attack upon the validity of the 18th amendment and parts of the enforcement act than heretofore brought to the court's attention.

Test Manufacturing Rights.
The other New Jersey case, brought by Christian Tegenpau, a Newark brewer, and the Wisconsin suit, while attacking the validity of the amendment, involve principally the right to continue the manufacture of beer alleged to be non-intoxicating, but containing more than one-half of one percent alcohol, the maximum allowed under the enforcement act.

N. J. Attorney Files Brief.
The eighteenth amendment is legislative in nature and revolutionary in character, according to Attorney General Thomas F. McGran of New Jersey in opening his argument in New Jersey's suit to have the amendment declared void and the Volstead act unconstitutional.

Attorney General McGran's brief declared that the eighteenth amendment was not constitutionally proposed; that the proposal is subject to judicial review; that congress did not by two thirds in number of both houses affirmatively vote for the proposal of the resolution; that three fourths of the states have not ratified in the constitutional sense.

Declares Act Is Not Constitutional.
The brief also declared that the national prohibition act is not appropriate legislation that there is no right in congress to legislate outside the words of the amendment; that the words "beverage purposes" sufficiently describe the heavy within which congress will legislate and the term "intoxicating liquors" is its own definition; that the Volstead law fixing the standard is in opposition to the constitutional provision.

CABINET MEETINGS NOT BEING HELD

In Spite of Wilson's Criticism of Lansing He Has Never Changed Policy.

By David Lawrence
Copyright 1920 by Janesville Gazette.
Washington, March 29.—Nearly two months have passed since the fateful day when Robert Lansing called the cabinet together and no function during the illness of president Wilson but through an official rebuke for summoning the cabinet without authority was issued at the time no meeting of the cabinet has since been called by the president himself.

Every Tuesday and Friday, members of the cabinet—especially the new ones—wait eagerly for the mystic ring on the telephone from the operating room of the White House telling them they are to experience the thrill of their first cabinet meeting. But many Tuesdays and many Fridays have gone by and no word from the president. Mr. Wilson appears well enough to take motor rides in Rock Creek Park and to conduct business for an hour or so a day but the strain of a cabinet meeting is evidently too much for him yet.

Strong Political Cabinet.
The president has a brand new secretary of commerce, secretary of agriculture, secretary of the interior and secretary of state and though David H. Houston sat in the agricultural chair before, he will now move up closer to the throne and occupy the chair of the secretary of the treasury. Attorney General Palmer is really a new man, and the familiar faces of Secretary D. Baker, secretary of war; Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy; William B. Wilson, secretary of the postmaster general; Burleson remain.

It's a strongly political cabinet, nevertheless, and the kind Mr. Wilson has been anxious to call together is a new beginning. The president likes men who can go out and make good campaign speeches and practically all of this cabinet are qualified for the stump. Secretary Alexander of the Department of Commerce, Secretary Wilson of the Department of Labor and Postmaster General Burleson campaigned actively before they became members of the House of Representatives. Secretary Daniels ran for governor of Iowa on the democratic ticket and is out making a few speeches now to advertise clubs, chambers of commerce and civic organizations. Secretary Palmer was the democratic national committeeman from North Carolina for 26 years. Secretary Baker was mayor of Cleveland and active in Ohio politics. Attorney General Palmer has been leader of the democratic caucus in the House of Representatives and was floor leader of the Wilson forces at the democratic convention of 1912 in Baltimore. He is an orator and a spellbinder. His speeches nominating Roosevelt in the progressive convention in 1916 or condemning Roosevelt later on for betraying the party are masterpieces of eloquence.

Two Only Non Politicians.
Only Secretaries Houston of the Treasury and John Barton Payne of the Interior Department cannot qualify as politicians. Eight of the ten in the Wilson cabinet will be heard from during the coming campaign. They are expected to do the fighting for President Wilson's policies.

Some of the ex-members of the cabinet probably will have their say, too, though perhaps they may not all be as enthusiastic about the Wilson policies as they used to be. William Jennings Bryan, Thomas W. Gregory, William G. McAdoo, Franklin D. Lane, Lindley M. Garrison, and Robert Lansing constitute the Wilson cabinet though it looks as if Mr. Lansing will divide honors with Mr. Garrison in maintaining absolute silence about the administration. Neither one satisfied the political qualifications of a cabinet member which Mr. Wilson seems to think is vital. Neither one made political speeches.

But with the battery of speakers which have now been collected by the president, there will be enough administration spokesmen to make up for the president's own inactivity to resume the fight on the stump.

No Cabinet Session.
But there has been no session of the Wilson cabinet yet to talk over the campaign or the matters of government which the cabinet members are supposed to be dealing with. Ever since last September when Mr. Wilson took sick, the executive branch of the government has been decentralized. Cohesion was confidently expected when Mr. Wilson dismissed Mr. Lansing but for some unexplained reason, the situation hasn't changed a bit from the days when enforced confinement inside the White House kept the president detached from his cabinet. Presidents differ however in their estimate of the value of cabinet meetings. Mr. Wilson has never learned heavily on his cabinet. He got accustomed to the elimination of one cabinet meeting every week during the war and of course when he went abroad he kept in touch in only the most superficial way with the heads of the different departments. Looking back over nearly two years, Mr. Wilson has seen very little of his cabinet either collectively or individually and has established thus far the record of holding no cabinet meetings whatsoever for more than seven months.

REBELLION ON WANE
IN RUHR DISTRICT
and the communists in the Ruhr region heard Paul Levy of Frankfurt, president of the communist party of Germany, declare that his party could not fight under the present conditions.
"We want to break off this fight as soon as we can," he said. "We cannot fight single handed against the rest of Germany."

The spokesman for the communists declared what his faction objected to was militarism. "Our kind of people are sick of it," he said.

Addressing Commander-in-Chief Lettner of the workers' forces, who it has been alleged was seeking to bring about a military dictatorship, Herr Levy said:

To Enforce Decisions.
"You must submit to our decisions. So long as we are the chosen representatives of the people, you, as well as every other military man, must submit to us."

Similar decisions, it is stated, are expected from Dortmund, Elberfeld and Bremen, which would mean the isolation of the Muelheim faction. This faction so far has not changed its attitude in making demands which far exceed the terms of the agreement reached a few days ago at Elberfeld for a settlement, the carrying out of which was prevented by further military activities on the part of the workers. These demands were for the complete disarming and disbanding of the regular troops and the establishment of a people's army composed of workmen, to which all arms must be surrendered.

$1,500 BLAZE AT PARKER PEN PLANT

Lightning Believed Cause of Early Morning Fire in Gazette Building.

Loss approximating $1,500 was caused by a blaze in the Parker pen plant on the third floor of the Gazette building early Sunday. A bolt of lightning striking a telephone wire is believed to have started the fire.

The alarm, a "still" sent in at 7 o'clock, was one of two which the fire department responded to in the early morning. The first fire was at 7:20 this morning and was the only one in which there was any damage.

The pen factory blaze was confined to the northeast corner of the finishing department through quick work in having a fire of about 100 feet square was burned through the floor, the desk of Supt. J. A. McDonough was reduced to ashes and several hundred pens in the making were scorched.

Water which leaked through to the main floor of the building did $200 damage to paper stock stored in the Gazette office. Firemen were obliged to smash the plate glass door to the pen factory to gain entrance and broke lock on another door in the factory. Damage to the building will exceed $600. Mr. Parker estimates the loss at $1,500.

Your Other Alarms. A false alarm at 3:30 Saturday afternoon, the second one of the season, called the fire department to a blaze yesterday morning. A chimney fire at the home of E. J. Smith, 330 North Academy street. At 6:30 last evening they pulled Dr. F. B. Farnsworth's car out of the mud on a chimney fire at the home of J. E. Whitten, 413 Cherry street.

ONE DRINK LASH'S BITTERS; TWO MORE ABLE TO GET WHISKY

Line up for Lash's Bitters! Don't crowd.

William O'Hara, factory worker, admitted in municipal court today that he became so intoxicated yesterday after taking several drafts of the above-named "heathy" liquid, as to be unable to care for his own safety and the safety of others "against the peace and dignity of the state of Wisconsin". He said he bought the Bitters in Milwaukee two weeks ago. When arrested by Officer Handy on Main street Sunday afternoon he was in a dazed condition.

Says New Mark. O'Hara was one of the three arraigned before Judge Maxfield this morning for intoxication, the first time he has been in court at one time on this charge since last July. The other two were: Mert Simmons and James Lund.

All three pleaded guilty and all paid their fines which ranged from $15 to $25.

Simmons was picked up about 1 o'clock Sunday morning by Officer Klein. He was sitting on the curb on North Franklin street with a bottle of pop in his pocket. In court today, he said he bought whiskey from a Beloit man at a party here.

Asleep in Alley. Whiskey, straight and pure, bought in Fond du Lac at $8 per quart put Lund in an intoxicated state according to his own admissions. He was found asleep in a muddy alley near Milwaukee street at 2 o'clock Sunday morning and taken to be carried half-way to the police station by Officer King.

Sentences were pronounced by the judge as follows: Simmons, 10 or 20 days; Lund, $15 or 20 days; O'Hara, $20 or 30 days.

AINSWORTH CASE TO CIRCUIT COURT

Judge George Grimm will decide the state's case against Frank Ainsworth, charged with failure to support his wife. A change of venue, taking the case out of Judge Maxfield's hands and putting it in the hands of the state's attorney, took place today in the municipal court today by E. H. Ryan, attorney for the defendant, who stated he believed the municipal court judge "would not decide impartially."

Ainsworth says he is "willing to take his wife back to live with him and that she has said she will do so" on the grounds he "made up" with her children. He is an employee of the P. B. Yates Machine company.

VOTING WOMEN HIT MORE SNAGS

Early Close of Registration in South May Prevent Use of Suffrage.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Washington.—Women in several states may be denied votes in the coming presidential election despite ratification of the suffrage amendment before November, it is said in the headquarters of the National Woman's party here, unless changes are made in registration laws.

In order that women all over the United States may register for the coming November election under existing laws, ratification must be completed before May 1, 1920, on which date Georgia closes its registration. Excluding Georgia the next date is June 30 when registration closes in Rhode Island. Registration in all other states does not close until September or October by which time suffrage leaders are confident the amendment will be ratified.

Other Factors in Way. Other requirements besides the element of time, may nullify the women's vote next November in the states, especially in the south, unless the legislatures are willing to make necessary changes in the laws. Payment of a poll tax is required in eight of the states; in Virginia over a period of three years before the election and in Florida and Louisiana for the previous year.

Payment of a poll tax on January 1, Alabama and Mississippi on February 1 and North Carolina and South Carolina on May 1.

Urges Registration Be Re-Opened. Pressure will be brought to bear upon the legislatures where necessary to have registration re-opened and the laws modified, it is said here, but women political leaders hope the changes will be accomplished without difficulty. In states where women have not heretofore been given the privilege of fulfilling the necessary requirements, provision should be made for them to go to the polls this November if the amendment is ratified in time, they assert.

CITY IS HOST TO PAIR OF YEGGMEN, MORRISSY LEARNS

One hundred dollars in currency was stolen from the safe of Allie Razook, 32 South Main street, on Saturday or late Friday night.

A box containing double this amount and placed alongside of the bag containing the currency was not touched. With what few clues they have, police incline to the belief the theft is an inside job. Mr. Razook says he closed the safe Friday night and the other in New York city.

AMERICAN EAGLE NEARS EXTINCTION; HUNTING IN ALASKA

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] New York.—A warning against the threatened extinction of the bald or American eagle, the national bird of the United States, was issued today by the American Museum of Natural History which stated that reports indicated that more than one-half of the species, three-quarters of the entire species already have been sacrificed.

Contributed to hunters in Alaska who are killing them for a bounty paid by the territorial government. Never numerous, hunters have exterminated more than 5,000 eagles were slain in a few months in their favorite breeding ground, the Alaskan peninsula. Hunters have exterminated their operations into the British provinces adjoining Alaska, it is said, to swell their gains.

After declaring that the American eagle preys chiefly on large rodents harmful to farm crops, for the control of which the government has recently established a museum, the museum declares that "tales of the American eagle's destructiveness to game or domestic animals are for the greater part pure fiction." The bird, it says, is migratory and therefore no state or territory can claim the right to destroy it, that right being vested in the federal government.

FORWARD, JANESVILLE!

To make Janesville a better place in which to live and in which to do business, the Gazette pledges itself to work for and support these things:

Housing survey to discourage exorbitant rentals; encouragement of building more houses; appraisal of property values so that rent profiteers may be made to pay the increased amount of taxes.

Open roads in the country 365 days of the year; better roads generally, and support of the road building plans; better streets and more paved streets in the city.

A market pavilion in the city which may also be used for many other purposes by farmers and livestock producers.

A community building to be used for auditorium, sport events, meetings, rest rooms, and also as a fitting memorial for soldiers.

Open the churches seven days a week and stop economic waste in room and time. Make basement meeting places for the young, and provide gymnasium facilities.

Build a real home for the girls who come here to work.

Open the fair grounds this year as a recreation park with tennis courts and other play apparatus. Establish parks and playgrounds.

Better the street car service as population increases.

On this day in 1844 the Springfield Republican, destined to be a great factor in the fight against slavery, was established by Samuel Bowles.

DENIALS ARE NOT ENOUGH.

Even though it be as charged by the managers of his campaign, that the statements made concerning the enormous fund raised to nominate Leonard Wood to the presidency are started by enemies, a mere denial will not suffice. Of course these charges were made by opponents. It is not to be supposed that the men who have contributed to the expense fund would father them. We have Newberry in mind when all who had part in his campaign, strenuously claimed the money was used "for legitimate purposes." But that was far beyond what the law or decency permitted, and the jury so held.

Gov. Lowden comes to the front with the clear demand that an investigation be made of his books and adds that they are open for inspection at any time. Gen. Wood's manager, Mr. William Collier Proctor, contents himself with a contemptuous denial and charges that it is the "last stand of the Old Guard." That is not enough. Every candidate before the republican convention must come clean, or walk the plank, and Gen. Wood is not too big to be immune.

AGAIN THE FARM LABOR PROBLEM.

It is to be noticed that the newspapers published in the larger cities are making to the possibilities of the situation precipitated by the shortage of farm labor. Tragic results are sure to follow if it is not remedied. The spirit of the metropolitan press has not been to give support to the farmer in his many problems. Great industries employing armies of men have been more the concern of the cities. The farmer has been a good buyer and provided a large market for manufactured articles. But the city faces something entirely different now. If there is less product and no way of planting or harvesting or marketing because there is no one to do the work, the man in the city, no matter what his wage may grow to be, is at the mercy of conditions largely created by himself.

In stricken Europe, with thousands starving and other thousands underfed, there is land enough and possibilities enough, to raise from the soil, the food needed. But the people have crowded to the cities, the men have been killed in war, and wasted acres have followed. For every man the farm is short, for every untilled acre here in America, for every bushel less of grain or other food crops, the people will pay toll, and that, too, in an uncertain quantity. High sounding theory, political economy and mass meetings against the high cost of food, will avail nothing. If the food is not raised, if it isn't produced, remedies afterwards fall hopelessly and completely.

OUR PRESIDENTS AND THE PEOPLE.

We have only one branch of the government of the United States directly, intimately and closely representing the people. That is the legislative, made up of the senate and house of representatives. Until the amendment to the constitution was passed providing for the election of senators by popular vote, the members of the house, were the only direct representatives of the people in the whole government personnel. This fact is recalled at this time in view of the attitude of many concerning the action of the senate on the league of nations and the peace treaty.

The president is not the personal representative of the people. He is not elected by the people directly. He is once removed by the plan we have of voting for electors. And while it is true that the names of the electors following that of the candidate for whom they are supposed to vote at some time in the future following the election, yet they are only morally and ethically pledged to do so and there is no legal reason why they should support one man as against the other. That is, there is no legal restraint against an elector whose name followed that of a democratic candidate at the head of the ticket, from voting for the republican when the electoral college met. He probably would be politically disgraced forever, but that would be the extent of his punishment possible—the contempt of his fellow citizens.

The cabinet is appointed, so are the justices of the supreme and other federal courts, and well that is so, for they are necessarily removed from the trades and influences of political ambition. But when the voice of the people is spoken it must be through its representatives in the congress of the nation. They are the immediate voice. And if they do not speak with that voice they may be readily changed. And in the arrangement of the government, the burden of carrying out the mandates of the congress, the work of seeing that the acts and laws made by the people's representatives, was placed on the president. He is not a general manager; he is an agent. He is not a dictator; he is a servant with a definite job. If he obstructs laws, if he refuses to carry out the instructions of the congress he is guilty of a breach of the constitutional limitations put upon him.

Therefore, when Mr. Wilson says he will not do this or that after congress has told him to do it, he is assuming authority not granted him and arrogating to himself rights which he has never been given. The men who made the constitution were careful to see that the rights and prerogatives of the president were carefully defined and limited, for they realized the danger in all

HUNGRY FOR SPRING.

Lord, I am hungry for spring:
For the birds on the wing,
For the laughter of children at play;
For the blossoming trees,
And the soft southern breeze,
And a glimpse at the beauties of May.

Give me back the blue sky
And the clouds drifting by,
And the rollicking laughter of a stream;
Let me get back to Thee,
With my spirit set free,
Let me live out a day in a dream.

I would wander once more
Where there's never a door,
Or a roof or a sheltering wall;
And find there anew,
Where man's worship is true,
The power which has fashioned us all.

From the sham and the strife
Of the game we call life,
And the poor little goals that we crave;
From the madhouse called town,
With its sneer and its frown,
I would go where all creatures are brave.

Tired of stone and of steel,
I want things which are real,
The birds and their courage to sing,
The trees and their speech,
And the lessons they teach—
Lord, I am hungry for spring!

republics of centralizing power in one man's hands and the possibilities of his assuming a dictatorship never contemplated. Some times it is well to recall just how far the power of a president permits him to go. For it would seem that he has wandered far afield in the last three years.

We may, inside of the next three weeks, look upon the Polish nation as again wiped from the geography of the world. Sweeping into its borders is the army of Lenin and the horde of bolsheviks. Once engulfed, Germany, now preparing herself for the reception of the army of destruction, with a soviet revolution, will scarce be able to avoid being the next victim.

When Spring rose this morning she found Winter back in his old seat by the dead fire. Her face clouded and she was ready to burst into tears. "I came back," says he, "for I can't seem to be comfortable nowhere else. I've about made up my mind to hang around up till June anyhow."

Milwaukee faces a girl shortage because there is no place to house them. Manufacturers there who employ large numbers of women are contemplating the erection or rental of homes for the girls. Janesville will have to wake up and do the same.

Beloit is taking the necessary steps to build a Y. W. C. A. building and complete an organization to provide a place for women workers. Where is Janesville in this movement? We need a Y. W. C. A. and other homes and clubs as well.

Carpenter says he will raise chickens when he retires from the ring. This is another blow administered by prohibition. A prize fighter used to be able to run a saloon and now he is deprived of that glorious privilege.

Germany has been concealing 12,000 cannon, and 6,000 airplanes. It will be discovered later that she has hidden an army around somewhere.

Backward Glimpses

FORTY YEARS AGO

March 29, 1880.—A jury was drawn up this morning to investigate the death of Peter Severson, who was run-over by a freight train, on the St. Paul track about two miles east of Orlinville, last night about 7:30 o'clock. They found that it was an accident, and although the train did not stop, they decided that the engineer knew nothing about it.

THIRTY YEARS AGO

March 29, 1890.—Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Hill, 155 South Third street, celebrated their forty-first wedding anniversary last night. Arrangements have been made by Messrs. Hamler and Elton, of the May Bretteau company, now playing at Lippin's hall, to lease that hall for the summer. They plan to give performances about twice weekly.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

March 29, 1910.—There have been two committees picked from the two Methodist churches of the city, the Court Street and the First, to find the opinion of the two churches concerning their uniting. Most of the members are in favor of this. An opera will be given in the Myers Opera House by the members of the Mississippi Golf Club in the near future. A man from Chicago has been hired to direct it.

TEN YEARS AGO

March 29, 1910.—The first post-lenten party was given by the members of the Unique club last night in the armory. One hundred and fifty couples attended. The first two carloads of equipment for the Monitor Auto company arrived in the city this morning and was moved to their location, on North Academy street. They have received a large number of orders which are to be filled this season.

School for Stage Children

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN, Director

Janesville Daily Gazette Information Bureau,
Washington, D. C.

New York, March 29.—Not long ago a well-known actress accomplished the world by telling it that her favorite amusement, followed with unflinching zeal during her leisure hours, was to study the physical facts, several elementary textbooks on this and other scientific subjects were her constant companions, she asserted, and anyone who called her would be apt to find some strewn all over the place.

Thus, the young woman not only managed to elude the unwelcome callers, but to call attention to a fact that has long been suspected by drama-makers—that the stage is badly educated actress. She explained, had been prematurely cut off at the age of 12, so that now, 13 years later, as her press agent declares, she cannot be kept away from the pursuit of rudimentary knowledge. The novelty fascinates her.

Wonders About Mrs. Fiske. The Frank and Mrs. Fiske made one to wonder how some of the older actresses like Mrs. Fiske and Julia Marlowe, who literally cut their teeth on the stage (Mrs. Fiske made her debut in a basket before she was able to walk), managed to learn to read and write. Would the fact that Fiske diligently studying algebra if one called on her, or Mrs. Sothen feverishly occupied with the motions of electrons between the two of them, or "Twelfth Night"? For when these great stars were children they did not have the school facilities for professional children that we have now.

Today, school is an incident in the life of the stage child—something to be hurried in between the act and the time of their rehearsal to allow for it; parents pay for it, and the children get it, and even the supporting youngsters they have a right to play hockey if they want to.

School Children's School. The Professional Children's school, in which most of the children of the New York stage and studio are enrolled as pupils, is conducted within the church on West Forty-eighth street. At first glance, you would never imagine a school was there at all, but if your eye is averted to the entrance, a small sign to that effect, leading to the basement entrance. Once inside, you are still mystified, because, while the school is a school, it is not a school in the usual sense. The children are not in the classroom, but in the dressing room, and the teachers are not teachers, but the mothers and fathers of the children.

One visitor, rumbling around in the dark passages for the school was finally rescued by one of the pupils, the other being a child, who led by the elbow through what suddenly loomed up as a door into a large, brightly-lighted playroom. A moment later, the pupil, who appeared actually dazzling. At one end there was a pool table, and at the other end, a large, ornate, and in the opposite corner stood a counter, supplied with milk chocolate, chewing gum and a soap and a small change. Behind it, on the wall, was a printed menu which seemed to indicate that a luncheon was being served, and indeed, the pupil who had volunteered his services as escort, now announced that such was the case.

Time for Luncheon. "If I can be of no further assistance, I should like to have my luncheon now," he announced politely, and sweeping back his head, he bowed and walked gravely toward the menu board.

The visitor found a middle-aged teacher in the adjacent diningroom. "These are some of the younger children," she said, holding a lettuce sandwich in one hand, and pointing to the corner of the room where the various small, wooden dining tables. All of them were distinct above the average in the way of the curls and sedateness.

"Would you care to go through the school?" inquired the teacher. Perhaps you would like one of the children to show you.

All Wanted the Job. But here her suggestion was cut short by a clamor. "Oh, teacher, let me, let me!" She was surrounded by a whirlpool of small aspirants for the job, which seemed to be regarded as a great honor, for a reason or other. While one felt sorry for the teacher, who was dragged about and her sandwich, it was a relief to note that the children were capable of undignified conduct. At first, it had seemed impossible.

"The child is a little chap, with a rather mature face, who managed to stuff the last bite of his into his mouth, and I play the piano unless forcibly restrained. "I am at present hopping between belief and unbelief in the possibility of my one ambition is to go right on smiling with my pen. "This is the story of my life so far, but if you will come next week, I'll have a lot more to tell you."

NEW MOTORCYCLE CHIMERS POLE; RIDER CAN'T PAY FINE

PERSONETTE. "WOODIE" COWAN. One day a rash reporter asked Woodie Cowan, the cartoonist and sports writer, to tell him the story of his life. No more was necessary. "I'm glad you asked me," he said, said the obliging Woodie. "I'll start at the very beginning and spare neither time nor imagination to make it interesting. To begin with I was born on Friday at 3:17 a. m. My full name is Woodson Messick Cowan, which you will admit is full that it suggests a cow and howl. I was successful for months and then became a democrat. As late as two years ago I objected to kissing, but I soon learned to overcome this habit and became a self-consciousness. I turned republican. I showed a fondness for bread and jam in 1895, was dumb at school, and became a bricklayer at 15. "Work was not in my line, however, so I entered the Chicago Art Institute in 1908, where I was a student on $2.50 a week. I turned waiter and later sang in cabarets and movies. Then I became more popular in art, and 80 cents a week for a week. "I first did cartoons for the Chicago Inter Ocean, which is now no more. The rumor that my art was responsible for the demise is false, however. Then I went to the New Orleans Item, where I did a humorous cartoon every day, and slept the other hour. The war found me with the Washington Times. At the opening of the 1916 election season, I went into World News, and am still trying to get even. I am now doing cartoons, comic strips, and articles on sport subjects with a New York syndicate. "I have many peculiarities: I sing, wear 13 buttons down my vest, sleep on my right side, like to be paged in hotels, and had 43 handkerchiefs in my last week's laundry; have shaken hands with Doc Cook and my Irishness teacher; been in the hospital for a week at present I am deeply interested in chemistry, experimenting currently during most of my spare time, with orange juice and other miscellaneous compounds. A cold and hungry bo;
I'm sure you'd keep a poor old tramp
From starving in the snow."

The lady listened open-eyed;
His smile lit up the gloom;
She quickly turned and went inside,
Then came back with the broom.

"You shall not starve upon the snow,
It is too cold to be on;
But you shall take this broom, poor
And clean a place to die on."

Oh, boy! We had the most pleasant surprise of our lives. Sunday morning the cellar was empty, in an obscure corner, a couple of bottles of beer—the genuine stuff that had been the result of a long and hard day's work.

As Tom Edgewood, the novelist, might have said, and in fact did say, to us the other day as we sat with our feet on the table at a Greenwich Village sort of party.

"If properly worked there are a lot of advantages to be gotten out of the authors' trade besides actual pay. First, no objection to trombone or wear last Monday's shirt at Friday's dinner party—and get away with it. An author need not have his hair his shoulder blades. When in the society of stock brokers, snow shovelers, editors, even in a Broadway sports, an author is never expected to say anything in a restaurant except, 'Well, do feel a little excited.' The only time an author is supposed to buy anything is when he is out with an actor or an interior decorator, and too much to be given by writers to see that they do not fall into such company."

The Colonial Dames are starting a movement to re-establish old-fashioned, pre-revolutionary courtesy to women in this country. They claim there is a singular lack of the courtesy and consideration of other days.

Right, when we elbow a lady off the platform of a street car, don't we always say "Excuse me?" When we blow our cigar smoke in her face, do we not say "Pardon?" Don't we always mutter an apology when we knock her hat off or when we elbow or unconsciously drop our gloves into her soup at the service-shelf?

Courtesy? You hear it on every hand. You may not see it, but you hear it—so it must be there, if you get what we mean.

Heart and Home Problems.

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON
Letters May be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of 20 and have been keeping company with a boy of the same age for nearly a year. He has treated me in every respect, with the exception of drinking several times. He always tells me about it, when he has been drinking. He does nothing out of the way when he does drink. He seems to be a nice fellow and comes from a respectable family. Two or three years ago his reputation was not to be envied, but he no longer acts as he did then and I really believe he intends to hold out doing better. He said he would for me.

Several days ago my brother-in-law and sister told me I had to stop going with him. If I don't, they will not have anything to do with me, as folks are talking or would talk about me for going with him. I told them he was not the boy he once was and that he was trying to be a man which I am sure he is. They did not want to believe it or they already have some objections to the boys I go with.

I am a girl of a respectable family and have lots of friends. Of course I do not want to do anything to cheapen my reputation. My parents do not object to our going together and seem to think a lot of him. He says he really loves me and I believe he does. I am sure I love him and it will break my heart to give him up. Please advise me what to do.

WORRIED.
Drinking now is inexcusable. If your friend drinks to any extent now but it is illegal, your sister and her husband are justified in the stand they take. I believe with them that it would be better to give up the young man than to spoil your own reputation. There are so many men with wholesome habits that it is foolish to walk right into trouble. Unless the young man loves you enough to consider your reputation and to protect it with his good conduct, he will not make a good husband.

band. Let reason rather than impulse govern you in this matter, since the happiness of the great part of your life depends upon the judgment you show now.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a man 30 and have never married. I met a lady several years ago whom I loved, but she was married and had a nice little home and some children. She was surely a lady. I could not stay away from her and she told me I had to go where I could not see her, for her husband was jealous of me. She promised that if she were ever single she would marry me.

The time came that she was. I wrote her but she answered that she did not care to marry yet. She married another man. My mind then was to kill myself, but as he is not good to her I am going to part from her. I will not have her abused by any man. I have lost track of her, but hope to find her soon.

Please advise me what would be best to do. I have a girl who wants me to marry her, but I can't as long as I know my dearest one is living.

A TRUE LOVER.
Your lot has not been a happy one since you have been denied the object of your love. You have one consolation left—to feel that you are doing the right thing. It would be right to kill or to separate her from the husband of her choice. When she is ready she will free herself from a man who is abusive. She knows where you are and realizes from your years of devotion that she can turn to you. I believe, however, that something is wrong. She has been faithful to you at least. Perhaps you have been worshipping an ideal all this time.

It would not be fair to the girl to marry her without love. When she finds she cannot have you she will turn to someone else and he happier in the end.

The DIARY OF AN ENGAGED GIRL

HER FAMILY BECOMES DOUBTFUL.

May 11.—Less than three weeks to my wedding day now. How time does fly! I am glad to say that I managed to finish my head of hair yesterday. It was really very well done—even if I do say so. The gang down at the studio seems to become more and more doubtful as the day nears. I never realized that I had become so dear to them. It makes me feel so strange, and as if I were dropping out of the game somehow. Jean says that if she ever does marry, and she feels sure that she will not, it will not be a day before she is 30. She says a woman changes her mind and tastes, ten times and more, before that age, and that if she does marry earlier she may regret it. She is not even if she does not do so. She points out the fact that she may want to change, and that the great tragedies of life, Goodness, it makes me shudder to think of what I may be unsuspecting myself committing at 10. I tried, mother, out on this same subject, not for enlightenment, of course, but merely to see how long I could hold out. She threw back her head and laughed at the very idea. Mother has such an uncomplimentary sort of a mind. She has thought just the same way each since she was 19! I must put it down to her being unmodern. I explained it to her, and she said that once a girl is married, has babies, worries and her home to manage, she has very little time to sit down and ponder over the past. I am sure.

Jack simply sniffs and hugs me hard, when I test him out on this same subject. He says he will ask me that question when I have been Mrs. Jack three months. Sounds sort of self-satisfied to me, but then I am prepared for anything after I am Mrs. Jack. Nothing shall scare me, of that I am determined.

Have you ever heard of William G. Atwood? Or, better, did you ever hear of him before the United States entered the war? If you are a civil engineer the name may be familiar, particularly if you came from Chattanooga, Tenn.

This quiet, industrious, able engineer was recruited out of his Chicago office by Brig. Gen. William Wallace Atwood, the latter was asked by President Wilson to assume command of the transportation of the American expeditionary forces in France.

When the war broke out in December, 1918, he was asked to assume the task of rehabilitating the railroads of central Europe and build new roads of transportation that central Europe might be fed. He is today in Serbia at the head of the technical expert service that is restoring that country's railroads and again connecting it with the outside world.

It is hard to know anything about what is occurring in and about Serbia you must understand the enormity of the job. He had to help to build roads, buy trucks, buy automobiles and cars, but he had to fight bolshevism, overcome the jealousy of neighboring countries, find labor as he could muster, quell constantly arising strikes and police newly constructed roads and the numerous revolutionaries blow them to kingdom come for no reason more understandable than pure cussedness.

Atwood is succeeding at the job. Which is saying much, for no harder task faces any American engineer today.

A genius engineer suggests that the sands of time contribute the grit with which some persistently cling to their favorite birthday.

Beware of Imitations and Substitutes

COL. WILLIAM G. ATWOOD
Have you ever heard of William G. Atwood? Or, better, did you ever hear of him before the United States entered the war? If you are a civil engineer the name may be familiar, particularly if you came from Chattanooga, Tenn.

This quiet, industrious, able engineer was recruited out of his Chicago office by Brig. Gen. William Wallace Atwood, the latter was asked by President Wilson to assume command of the transportation of the American expeditionary forces in France.

When the war broke out in December, 1918, he was asked to assume the task of rehabilitating the railroads of central Europe and build new roads of transportation that central Europe might be fed. He is today in Serbia at the head of the technical expert service that is restoring that country's railroads and again connecting it with the outside world.

It is hard to know anything about what is occurring in and about Serbia you must understand the enormity of the job. He had to help to build roads, buy trucks, buy automobiles and cars, but he had to fight bolshevism, overcome the jealousy of neighboring countries, find labor as he could muster, quell constantly arising strikes and police newly constructed roads and the numerous revolutionaries blow them to kingdom come for no reason more understandable than pure cussedness.

Atwood is succeeding at the job. Which is saying much, for no harder task faces any American engineer today.

A genius engineer suggests that the sands of time contribute the grit with which some persistently cling to their favorite birthday.

DIAMOND CUT DIAMOND

By JANE BUNKER

Copyright by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"It isn't all," I asserted. A bit indignant. "It's only the beginning of a new chapter of misery for the whole of us—it's throwing the responsibility on you without getting me out of the net—it won't save me from being kidnapped and searched and maybe murdered to keep my mouth shut—"

"You're right," he nodded at that and said, "I'll take a cigarette out of his case and with a short, May I light up?" and began to blow rings, gazing at them abstractedly. I nibbled crumbs. After I'd stood his silence for half a cigarette, I repeated my question in a low tone, "You're going to do nothing—right—off—now—to-night—"

"Of course," He smoked another quarter and three cigarettes with bounding up as he spoke.

"What are we going to do?" he gave forth masterfully. "We've got to do it. The old man all by our little own selves—you and I. And we'll give him one nice lesson on stealing diamonds and rings, and women—"

"But we've got to hurry," I urged. "I can't live this way much longer—it's simply killing me!"

"Sure," Billy agreed, suppressing a smile at first. "I'm hurrying all I can. I calculate to have my 'mosso' in handcuffs tomorrow night." And he unfolded his plot and I learned into it with fervor. The truth is Billy and I were having the fun of our lives.

The scheme was to decoy monsieur to the flat by a letter from Mrs. Delario indicating where the diamonds were hidden; we banked on his remembering the one place he hadn't searched—the hyacinths—and if he got the tip we believed he'd return the moment I went out.

After some discussion Billy and I decided not to take Mrs. Delario into our confidence, not knowing how she'd act in the crisis, which necessitated our imitating her writing. The only sample of her writing we had was her address in my notebook and some titles of books on spiritualism she'd wished me to read. But the sample did us, and the joint literary efforts of myself and Billy produced the following—this purporting to be from me to her:

My Dear Mrs. Delario: Since he searched everything, but the bunch of hyacinths as I told you over the telephone Tuesday (this struck me as an exquisitely neat, convincing touch, for his detective must have reported both that I telephoned and the number of the call)—I thought the same place would continue safe in case of a second invasion. I got a fresh bunch, so you will know where if anything happens to me. If so, come and get them at once; break in the flat if you have to.

I am going to try to see you Saturday night for final arrangements if I can slip out without being seen. Expect me between eight and ten. Be sure to be alone so we can talk. I still hold to my promise—one-third to you if you will help me to dispose of gum-drops.

"Gum drops" was Billy's touch—he declared that "mosso" would read it "diamonds" sure as anything. And this, purporting to be from her to him:

Monsieur: I have refused to have anything to do with this matter since I know the truth of the ownership. Under the circumstances, I feel she is foolish to try to hold on to the hyacinths. She is at my house tonight, and the trouble will be over for everybody.

I typed my own letter with a carbon copy while Billy industriously produced the one from Mrs. Delario. (The decoy letters we sent to the hotel where monsieur was staying. The rest of our plan was this: Billy was to 'sneak' the hyacinths into the flat; I was then to put on my wraps, go down in the elevator, telling George I was going out for the evening—and he'd report it to monsieur; wait in the lower hall for a mythical automobile till George went up with the car, and then creep up the stairs.)

"This time tomorrow night I'll present you with a nice 'mosso' in handcuffs," affirmed Billy confidently.

"Suppose he doesn't come? Or suppose he murders me tonight?"

"Oh, the guns!" He snatched up his overcoat and lived into the pocket for a pair of tin snips and the table, saying cheerfully: "He will come and he won't murder you—not if you keep your wits about you. They're loaded."

He slipped the coat on. He was going—in high feather; but my heart sank at the prospect of another night and that man lurking in the house.

"Keep a stiff upper lip—behold of the greatest diamond robbery of the century!" he bellowed. "I'll be here at six tomorrow—I'll pick up his hat."

"Oh, I'm all right," I returned nonchalantly, feeling suddenly, knocked down yet determined not to let Billy suspect it.

I rang for the elevator, and while the car was rumbling up Billy glided away in the darkness of the stairs back of it. He must, have reached only the first turn when I heard him exclaim, "Oh! Excuse me! I never saw you!"

Followed the word, "Pardon!" and I recognized monsieur's voice!

I had the presence of mind to stuff my curls and hair back into my flat, noiselessly shutting the door. Was he merely coming to look me in, or had he been listening? My forebodings every moment increased, for up to one o'clock when I went to bed—he had failed to look me in.

WHEN A MAN'S MARRIED

BILLY WHISKERS

By FRANCES TREGO MONTGOMERY

"Well, Billy how do you like being caged?" asked the animal trainer as he stood before Billy Whiskers, now in the wildcat's cage.

"Yes, you vicious beast, you, how do you like being shut up where you can't butt and send people flying into the air?" asked the ring master, who had joined the animal keeper.

"Oh, it is you, is it? Well, you just wait until I get out of here and see where I will butt you next time."

When they left his alone Billy tried every way he could think of to break out, but he could make no impression on the iron bars, chewed as he would—in fact, he broke one of his teeth trying. Then he tried butting out the ends of the cage, but it was of no use. Next he roamed the fields and towns, master of himself, too long to take being shut up easily.

At last Billy fell asleep and only awakened when they hitched the horses to the wagon-like cage he was in to draw it to the depot. Just before they started he heard a man say: "Here, you forgot to put up the sides on that cage with the goat in."

Then the man brought wooden sides and fastened them on to the cage over the iron bars. This left Billy only a little iron barred opening near the top, at one side, to get air through.

(More about Billy in his cage tomorrow.)

"Not all the poets," observed a frequenter of cosmopolitan society, "have the gift of uttering quick, light-winged magical nothings in society."

"I knew of one poet, greatly in vogue in Paris some years ago, who was not exactly a first dispenser of epigrams. He was invited to the house of a great lady of the Faubourg St. German, and as soon as he entered he became the center of a circle of admirers, who waited vainly for some subtle or poetic conceit. The poet remained silent, ill at ease, red in the face and uneasy of feet.

"Come, my dear poet," the hostess finally begged, "say something to us!"

"Have you observed—Duchess," he faltered, "dear lady—that this year's pawn tickets are pink?"

"Do you believe in transmigration of souls?" asked the Little Man.

"Sure," replied the Big Man. "Why?"

"Nothing," answered the Little Man.

WILSON SILENT AND SAYS WOOD

Democrats Uneasy About
Third Term Candidacy
Will Speak to Convention.

By DAVID LAWRENCE.
Copyright 1920 by Janesville Gazette.
Washington D. C., March 28.—
"What's the next move in the treaty situation?" is the question which a crowd of correspondents asked at the White House today.

"Ask the people on Capitol Hill," was the reply given by the officials. Presumably conversant with President Wilson's plans or intentions. From this conversation as well as from the fact that fully a week has gone by without a statement of any kind from the president it is being generally inferred that Mr. Wilson considers the responsibility for the present mis-venture to rest squarely on the shoulders of the United States senate, and that the latter should worry about how to extricate itself from the dilemma in which the foreign relations of the United States has been placed by the defeat of the peace treaty.

This is a favorite point of view in administration quarters—letting the other fellow "stew in his own juice" as the phrase is. But the treaty is not before the senate. It has been returned to the White House. Mr. Wilson is in no hurry to return it to the senate, preferring to see what congress is going to do about a resolution declaring peace.

Many members of congress seem to think the peace treaty is a poor thing, proclaiming peace coupled with a general declaration of policy would be sufficient substitute for the peace treaty itself. This view is opposed by republicans and democrats alike who think the senate will still be open to the charge of blocking peace if no treaty is ratified by the time of the next elections. There is more over a division of opinion on the declaration of policy, the entire mid reservationists and others from states favoring the league of nations being anxious to have the resolution contain a declaration of the principle of the league. To this, however, men like Senators Borah and Johnson, who have conducted their whole fight against the league of nations, are opposed. Debate over the joint resolution will unquestionably produce in the senate so much quarreling and long drawn out discussion over the policy the United States should pursue that the two big political conventions at Chicago and San Francisco will probably be here before any action is taken.

President Wants League in Campaign.

The president wants the league taken into the campaign as a political issue. He is wise enough to know that if he injects his own personality into the fight and seeks a third term, the active cooperation of the league of nations will be brought into serious doubt. People who have refused to believe Mr. Wilson was personally ambitious to retain the executive power would be reluctant to believe that the league was merely a device or vehicle for a third term campaign. All the rules of logic as Wilson followers express them would seem to indicate that the president has not for a moment disapproved of the active cooperation of the league of nations. If the president intended to run for a third term, he would show disapproval of the active cooperation of the league of nations. General Mitchell Palmer, Governor Cox of Ohio, and other intimate friends, he hasn't. The effort made by Representative Humphreys of Mississippi, democrat, to smoke out Mr. Wilson on the third term question, is a direct consequence of the misunderstanding on Capitol Hill or rather lack of information about the president's plans.

Messrs. Kitchin and Clark, who congratulated Mr. Humphreys after his speech, are not over-fond of Mr. Wilson and would like to see a declaration that would take him out of the political game altogether. To the House Mr. Wilson has played far too dominant a part in the democratic party to slip out inconspicuously and unnoted as his term of office approaches an end. The consensus of opinion is that he is holding back on the third term question simply to keep his own party together and his political opponents guessing and that he will make a formal statement of his position at the proper time and the proper place—the democratic national convention at San Francisco with the delegates of the democratic party. But Mr. Wilson has other things, too, to communicate to that convention—something, for instance, that the democrats can call a "ring" and make a declaration of principle for their platform.

Will Write the Planks. Mr. Wilson will write the planks that will be presented to the democratic senators who voted against or for the treaty without reservations, though it will take expert phraseology to avoid entangling the 21 democrats who voted with the Lodge republicans and the 23 democrats who voted with the republican irreconcilables. But for the present, the white house maintains silence—watchfully waiting for the man on Capitol Hill to make the next move on the check-board of national politics.

M. E. CHURCH HOLDS INSTALLATION SERVICE

The officers and teachers of the Sunday school of the Central Methodist church took part in installation service yesterday morning. It was the first instance of the kind with the local society, but formed a festive beginning for the new year of service. About 50 in number, the Sunday school workers occupied seats at the front of the auditorium, and immediately after the sermon they joined in a responsive service, wherein they pledged themselves to faithful work in the discharge of their duties in connection with the school.

The superintendent, J. E. Lane, gave an informal talk on the different departments of the school, and their several needs. He emphasized the thought that the Sunday school had a place for everyone from the baby to the elderly shut-ins.

1000 TEACHERS ASK HIGHER SALARIES

Members of Southern Wisconsin Association Make Demand for 12 Months' Wage Scale.

More than 1,000 teachers, 80 of them from this city, attending the thirtieth annual meeting of the Southern Wisconsin Teachers' association at Madison went on record Saturday as demanding adequate compensation for teachers with a 12 month wage scale. The resolution unanimously adopted read:

"Be it resolved, that we insist upon establishment of an adequate wage scale which shall be based upon a 12 month year, and which shall be sufficient to bring into our ranks a greater number of the ablest and most ambitious of our young men and women, and which shall compare favorably with the compensation given to other professions. We believe the compensation of teachers to account the long period of preparation necessary, the exacting nature of the services which we must give, and the fact that we are maintaining the average teacher can sustain the exacting demands of the profession."

Be it further resolved that for bringing about these desirable ends that it is right and proper that the teacher organize for the purpose of effective action, but do not affiliate with any organization foreign to ourselves."

Another resolution adopted provides that the association set and maintain a higher professional standard.

Supt. J. T. Waddell, Evansville, was elected treasurer of the association at the election of officers which was held at the close of the meeting. Schoolmen from all parts of the state and well known educators from out of the state had parts in the program. Sectional and general sessions were held.

Other officers chosen for the association were: Kingsbury, president; A. H. Burns, Green county superintendent, first vice president; Mrs. Antoinette Duran, Platteville, second vice president; Miss Mary Hargrave, secretary.

DISCUSS RAISE FOR WISCONSIN TEACHERS

Supt. J. T. Hooper, president of the school board, and S. M. Smith will represent the local board of education at a state meeting of school board members to be held in Madison tomorrow. The meeting is called by State Superintendent C. F. Cary for the purpose of considering the teachers' wages and what shall be done to overcome the present and future shortage of teachers.

"Wisconsin, like most other states, has a serious problem in the teacher shortage," Supt. Cary says in a letter to the school board. "We will be without sufficient teachers to run our schools unless wages are raised, which will induce teachers to enter the profession."

THOUSAND FARMERS ATTEND JANESVILLE POWER FARMING DAY

Nearly a thousand farmers and others interested attended the power farming exhibit and exercises given by the Cudahy Packing Co. at the service station on Saturday. Luncheon was served to all at 11:30 by H. G. Sewell. An orchestra furnished music during lunch and afterwards there was a vaudeville performance.

Robert Bugge presided at the speaking program which followed. John Reilly, farmer of Fond du Lac county, talked on power farming and its solution of the labor problem. A. E. Hildebrandt, known as an authority on power farming, spoke of the use of the tractor and the place it had made in solving many of the problems of the farmer. A. W. J. Gilpin, spoke of power farming service and read the prize essay written by Mildred School of Hanover, District No. 6. Among other things Miss School said in her essay:

"Power farming also makes farm life far more enjoyable for everyone on the farm. It does away with the less chores, taking of horses. It aids the mother and the girls for it means less hired help. The operator of a tractor does not get out of the house like the operator of a plow or some other implements, so that the washing of dirty clothes, by the way, is lessened. The tractor plowing field. And because the tractor is easier and earlier, which means more time to spend in the evenings for pleasure. The children will not be so likely to seek the city, where there are so many temptations and thought less accidents."

It greatly increases the boy's interest in farming. He will be more content to stay on the farm. If his father owns a tractor, because he enjoys operating gasoline or kerosene power better than animal power. Animal power must be urged or let take its time, while a tractor pulls even and does not need urging. One of our neighbor boys said he would not stay on the farm if his father did not buy a tractor.
